The Energy Charter is an inter-governmental organisation whose legal basis is the Energy Charter Treaty (ECT), the only potentially global multilateral treaty in the energy sector dealing with all aspects of energy systems, including investment, transit, trade and energy efficiency. More information on the Energy Charter is available at <http://www.encharter.org>.

NEMA is the USA association of electrical equipment and medical imaging manufacturers, founded in 1926 and headquartered in Arlington, Virginia. Its 400-plus member companies manufacture a diverse set of products including power transmission and distribution equipment, lighting systems, factory automation and control systems, and medical diagnostic imaging systems. Total U.S. shipments for electroindustry products exceed $100 billion annually. More about NEMA is available at <http://www.nema.org>.
